DAVID R. MURRAY,
REV. J. L. EDRINGTON, } EDITORS.
NOVEMBER 6, 1878.

This week we send the BRECKENRIDGE NEWS to our readers with more home-reading and home-print than ever before. Up to this issue one-half of the paper was printed at a distance, consequently but half of the paper was devoted to home-news and home-correspondence. The business of the office, in the last few months, has increased to such an extent as to induce the publisher to print the whole paper at home. This is a great improvement, from several considerations. We were so circumscribed, for the want of room, that nearly all of our country correspondents were crowded out. All matter in the way of essays on agriculture, horticulture, and farming in general, have been put in the box for the want of room in the paper. We now solicit all such matter from intelligent and experienced persons. We will make room for any readable article that may be offered. The publisher and editors of the NEWS are determined to make it one of the most readable papers in the State. It will have all of the current news items, with all of the home-correspondence, and, selected matter of the purest moral bearing and the highest literary culture. The patronage and co-operation of our readers are earnestly solicited.

We have many very interesting communications in our box awaiting their turn, like grists at a mill—first come, first served. But they will come to the light after awhile. Some, however, we are necessarily compelled to decline. We do this because we respect the writer. We don't see ourselves as others see us, and consequently, are frequently deceived in ourselves, and especially in our capacity to come before the public as a writer of prose or poetry. Send us all of the readable news in your town or neighborhood.

It is being whispered around now, among the unsatisfied, that the Hardinsburg fair was a good excuse for members of the churches to attend the horse races, but it's a slander, it's no such thing; just because the judgment of some of those good people were better on the speed of a horse than you sinners, and because, thereby you lost something, you begin to talk slander. Now, you just dry it up before you get into trouble. It would not surprise us one bit, if some member of the church didn't sue for his character yet, before this thing is done with.

The noble H. A. Tyler, of Fulton, is spoken of as a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor. We know him, and can say that no more noble, trustworthy and efficient man lives in the State of Kentucky than he. If he should be elected the State will have an officer whose record will never be blurred by either inefficiency or corruption.

Hon. T. L. Cleveland, of Bracken county, is a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor. Mr. Cleveland is an accomplished parliamentarian, a social, pleasant gentleman, an honest man, intellectual and well informed, efficient and capable, and, withal, a thorough Democrat. If these qualifications are not sufficient for the Lieutenant-Governor, ship the "next."

On last Tuesday night about 8 o'clock, Mr. Thomas R. Bland, accompanied by James Sturgeon and one of his sons, Watt Bland, went to the residence of Mr. Wash Weatherholt, who lives about four miles from town, and after calling Mr. Weatherholt out to the door, asked him where his son Billie was. Mr. Weatherholt answered that he did not know. Whereupon a difficulty arose, in which Mr. Bland drew his gun on Mr. Weatherholt but was prevented from firing by Mr. Weatherholt who caught the gun and turned the muzzle from his person. Mr. Weatherholt then procured a gun and a general quarrel took place participated in by Mrs. Weatherholt. Nothing more occurred, Mr. Bland leaving, threatening to kill Mr. Weatherholt and his son William.

The cause of the difficulty was the alleged seduction of Mr. Bland's daughter by the aforesaid William. Mr. Bland was trying to force William to marry the girl, but he fled to parts unknown. Mr. Bland thought that the father was seeking his son. The parties were examined before Esquires Raitt and Pierce and held in bonds of $150 each for Criminal court.

Two Ruffians entered the house of Mr. Connelly, in Bullitt county, on the morning of the 25th ult., and finding him absent, made a very vicious assault upon Mrs. Connelly, who defended herself heroically. The first round she split the arm of one of her assailants, from the shoulder to the elbow, with a cleaver. This fiend retreated in good order. She was knocked down by the second ruff, but just at this instant a deaf and dumb girl came into the room and immediately took the situation, and broke a chair over the head of the tramp. By this time Mrs. Connelly gained her feet and made a pass at the assailant with the cleaver severing one of his ears from his head. The two fled in haste, leaving several bundles behind, one of them a package of Bibles, which they pretended to be selling.

Willis Hays says there is a swell coming in the Ohio river. Bosh! we can show him half a dozen of them here in Cloverport.

The Congressional election is now over. The candidates for State offices will now let themselves out and for the next nine months we will see many would-be Governors, Lieutenant-Governors, etc.

We regret to learn that Tim Jordan, near Webster, had his residence destroyed by fire one day last week. Loss very heavy, with no insurance. Mr. Watt Skillman had a great many household goods stored away in an upper room which were all lost.

The "bloody shirt" is again to be the key-note of Republican electioneering in the Presidential canvass. That party sees that its financial course has severed its main artery, and it seeks to staunch the wound with the same old shirt.

The Kentucky Republican of the 26th Oct. had a well developed case of yellow fever. It came out as yellow as gold. We could have accounted for its looking blue just a few days before the election, but why it took on the yellow fever so late in the season, is unaccountable.

Harry Bassett, the great race horse, died at Trenton, New Jersey, on the 27th ult. He had been feeble for a long time, and when the telegraph arrived announcing the fact that he had been distanced at Hardinsburg, Ky., he snuffed the flickering flame of life and quit this mundane shore.

It turns out that the amount stolen from the Manhattan Savings Bank, of New York, is over $3,000,000—but those bankers are rich, they will hardly miss so small amount as that.

A word of advice to young ladies who play on the piano.

First. Always learn to play, that is a sine qua non, but when you are asked to play, no difference by whom, always refuse, and don't forget to say, "I can't play." After being asked twenty-one times, however, you may, with perfect impunity, play. No difference if you can't play but on piece, always ask your company what they will hear. If they wish to have Blanch Alpin, the Maiden's Prayer, or Hudson Polka, don't say "I can't play them," just say "they are not among my music." Then commence and turn over forty-nine pieces of music, looking carefully at each one, and be an hour and a quarter about it. In this way you will wear off your embarrassment, and have your company considerably under the weather; they will be willing to hear and praise anything. By this time they will have found "Haste to the Wedding" or "Put me in my little bed." After you have finished either or both of them, remain on the stool until your mother says "that will do, daughter." Then throw yourself into a rocking chair, feeling that you are the sweetest and the prettiest thing in the world. That's the way I did when I was a girl, and I got married at seventeen.

From Hon. H. A. M. Henderson, LL. D., State Supt. Public Instruction, Kentucky.

WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY.—"I desire to call the attention of School Trustees and teachers to the fact that the State Board of Education has adopted Webster's Unabridged Dictionary as the standard authority for the Public Schools of Kentucky. The new edition of this wonderful work is well-nigh perfect as a lexicon. It excels in defining scientific terms, its etymology is without a rival, and it is a grand compendium of knowledge. The Board regards that either the Unabridged or Academic Dictionary is an almost indispensable adjunct to every school-room, and second only in importance to the blackboard. The Trustee of each district should try and secure one for the use of the Common School, as by its employment a great deal of useful instruction may be communicated, and a standard of appeal is always at hand when a question in etymology, orthography, or orthoepy is mooted. It may be furnished as a part of the necessary furniture of the school-room, when a tax has been voted for furnishing purposes.

The Board also introduced in the course of study Webster's Primary School Dictionary, and it is earnestly recommended that a class be formed in it, in every school in the State. The Unabridged Dictionary is published by G. & C. MERRIAM, Springfield, Massachusetts, and the Primary and Academic editions by IVESON, BLAKEMAN, TAYLOR & CO., New York."

A Letter from Hancock County.

Lewisport Ky., Oct. 11th, 1878.

Editors Breckenridge News:

Sirs:—I will try and pencil this a little plainer than the other communication so that your printer will not make any mistakes, as there were several in my other letter. I am somewhat disappointed in the election news from the States voting on Tuesday last. These Democratic defeats will be attributed to the movements of the despisable independent party. On the other hand the Republicans will complain of the same for their defeats. The small vote cast for the Democratic candidate is the result of the Democratic office-seekers going over and swearing allegiance to the Toledo platform. The bankers and money changers voted, no doubt, with the hard-money Republicans, and a great many lawyers, also, who are or may be their attorneys, being always willing to serve good paying clients.

In my former communication I said money ought to be free, nor should the word of God be handled around to the highest bidder. Interest and usury destroys every country's liberties and prosperity. You introduced a bill in the Senate last winter which was very good of the sort from your standpoint, but if you live as long as I have, you will conclude that everybody's credit should be his or her honor, not the property as a basis of credit. This system would make debts small and credit for small periods of time. Consequently everybody's business would be in his hand and on his mind. There would be no forgetting what we owe, and when our time comes to a close here below, our estates could be wound up at a very small cost. The only disadvantage in this system that I can conceive of is, that the Attorneys would be shorn of an immense business, but what would be their loss would be the gain of everybody else. The greatest gain to the many is the true Democracy. It is not only a gain to the temporal man in dollars and cents, but the larger gain of contentment and peace to the moral man, which breeds much better civilization than has been yet attained. We need much. Simplification of our laws in this Democratic State of Kentucky as well as elsewhere hence we, the farmers and workmen, must organize, educate and legislate for our own interest and the interest of American liberty. Mr. Jefferson, who I believe was the best and greatest man who ever lived on this continent, Peter Cooper, perhaps the best in our day. Mr. Jefferson once said, in the Colonial Congress, that it was impossible for one hundred and fifty lawyers to do business together. They were educated to argue everything by the hour, that which should be done in a few minutes. John Bright, the great Commoner of England and leader of the Liberal Republican party for forty years, said, last winter in the House of Commons, that you had as well expect a spider to give up his web as expect the lawyers to simplify and economize the laws. This is his experience in his country. What is ours? Here are two witnesses that nobody but a tyrant or lawyer will undertake to impeach or silence. Workingmen! Let these witnesses be heard all over this land, teach it to your poor children and ignorant neighbors. Don't say as Cain said, "Am I my brother's keeper?" If you do, it will come home to you or your family after you are under the sod of condemnation and remorse for a failure of a simple, plain duty that is easier to perform than to neglect. A stitch in time saves nine.

In my next I wish to call the attention of our people, through your paper, to some very important improvements in our mode of assessing property, collecting taxes, stock law, school tax and the repeal of the license system for coffee-houses and their associate gambling houses or rooms. Their stock in store, and perhaps their largest profits, come from this last named institution.

It will be worth riding ten miles to hear the Rev. Dr. Dixon lecture. He will undoubtedly be here about the second Sunday.

The Rev. Dr. Dixon, late of New Albany, Ind., is expected here to preach on the second Sunday in this month, and will also deliver a lecture on Monday and Tuesday nights following. The subject of Monday evening's lecture will be "about the ladies," and that of Tuesday "the look of Ruth." If this should prove a success it will be the beginning of a series of lectures to wake up this sleepy old town, which is as dead as The bullfrogs around little Moses, On the old banks of the Nile.

Eli Lewis has bought out J. F. Arms, lock, stock, and barrel. Eli is a good fellow and lacks only one thing, and that is another rib. He says he is going to keep "back;" three meals on dough bread and crackling meat will set him hunting a bird for his cage.

Now is the time for putting up the "cussed" stove for your wife. Don't let her hire a man, put it up yourself in a "jiffy." Easiest thing in the world. Haul it out of its hiding place, smash your big toe the first move, that nerves you for the work. Get your darling wife to put in the legs while you hold it up. If they don't fit, ask her if she takes you for Sampson. As a rule the front legs fall out while you are putting in the hind ones. Now for the pipe: Put on the first one, of course the next one don't fit. So much the better. Bang it—jam it! on it goes and off comes an inch square of skin from your finger. You can do it then if you want to. Should your wife nurse, look daggers at her. Don't stop to wipe the finger make a dash for the next joint. It never did fit. Bless the tinner, he needs it—take it out in the yard and hammer the rivets all out, jump up and down on it, slap over the children, kick the dog, that helps it. It goes right on a foot or more. Get a chair and try the elbow now. They always fit—one end at a time. When you get it on, jam it in the flue. Never mind the soot in your eyes. Ask your wife how she expects you to do anything with her in the room. Now the elbow is all right but the pipe is off at the bottom. Call your wife and enquire if she thinks you are to put up that stove and her a mile off. There it's all right at the bottom but out of the flue. Give it a big surge and over goes the chair, down you go, pipe and all. The clatter of the pipe, relping of the dogs, and laughter of your wife, makes you feel good. Wash off the soot, tie up the finger, slip out and send a man to fix it.

Died of Curiosity.

Mrs. Vonbungs, Mrs. De Paris and Mrs. Smyth were in conversation. The two ladies first mentioned were French, the third, Mrs. Smyth, an American. The conversation had gone on pleasantly for some time when Mrs. Vonbungs observed to Mrs. De Paris, "I have a secret, a great secret, which I wish to tell you; if Mrs. Smyth will excuse me, I will tell you in French." "Certainly," said Mrs. Smyth, "go on." Mrs. Vonbungs then proceeded, and during the recital they both dried their moistened eyes on their handkerchiefs, and betrayed considerable emotion. It was too much. Mrs. Smyth's womanly instincts got the better of her. She had a violent attack of the curiosity, and before medical aid could reach her, she had gone to that sweet elysium where secrets are never told.

Yellow Fever.

This dreadful disease still holds to some points in the South; notwithstanding Jack Frost has broken his backbone he still breathes. At Memphis, Vicksburg and New Orleans they have an occasional death. Business seems to be starting up all over the South. The Howard Association in the various towns are disbanding and the nurses leaving.

POSITIVE RULES. There are numerous remedies that cure sometimes and become trusted as useful, but none have ever proved so effectual—cured so many and such remarkable cases—as Dr. Ayer's medicines.

The Cherry Pectoral has restored great numbers of patients who were believed to be hopelessly affected with consumption.

Ague Cure breaks up chills and fever quickly and surely.

Ayer's Compound Extract of Sarsaparilla eradicates scrofula and impurities of the blood, cleanses the system and restores to vigorous health. By its timely use many troublesome disorders that cause a decline of health are expelled or cured.

Ayer's Pills and their effects are too well known everywhere to require any commendation from us here.—Scranton (Pa.) Times.
